'owers Hesitate as Far East Problem Is Put Before Them

China's Representative Offers Detailed Statement Regarding Her Interests.

PERTS IN CONFERENCE

By Associated Press
BUT LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A detailed statement regarding China's interests and her attitude on far Eastern questions was made today by Minister Sun at the first meeting on specific and unanswered questions.

This proposal was understood to provide a settlement of the problem, especially with respect to China on the basis of complete territorial integrity.

China, including Shantung, came to freedom of action for China and universal recognition of the open door.

Pro-ports were that the delegates would remain in session well into the morning, preparations having been made for the serving of lunch in the hall where the session was held.

WASHINGTON Nov. 16—Problems of the Far East, whose solution is assigned an integral part of the question of armaments took center of attention at the arms conference to-day, while the plan for the reduction of naval establishments was passing through a period of technical examination at the hands of a committee of experts.

For the first time the delegations of United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, China, Belgium, Portugal and the Netherlands, acting as a committee of the whole on the Far Eastern question assembled to hammer out procedure. In contrast to former in which the conference killed the armaments problem, this meeting day, the representatives of powers were. Into the committee acting working on one another to ask first about the intricate question that long have troubled diplomatic relations in the Pacific and the Far East. Of course every nation had other concrete idea of the principles it wanted to present once the negotiations began but no one seemed able to break the ice.

The attitude of the United States is to let the government in the Far East situation as it was in the question of armaments. Both China and Great Britain had made first Lieutenant. Both of these men trained with Company C at Camp Hancock, and fought with it in France. Mr. Johnson, who served in the world war in another outfit, had been commanding second lieutenant.

Captain Schell found it impossible to devote the time to the company that it required without neglecting his private interests with the Schell Hardware company, the Schell Coal company and the Schell Hardware firm. Lieutenant McDowell, who is a farm agent, is subject to call from all the hundreds of farmers, and has very little time left for recreation.

Britain Would Limit U-Boats To 250 Tons

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—British naval thought in London has suggested 250 tons as the limit of size for submarines as it was learned today.

That would represent a type of craft now existing in the first line of the American Navy. It would be akin to the days of Goliathus the Pike, the Viper and the Tarantula who could be found on navy lists as the A-3, A-5, B-1 and B-3.

These boats are the oldest in the Navy and are included in the second line group more as a type of self-propelling floating mines for harbor defense. The last two displaced 16 tons on the surface and 27 submerged. The next oldest boat in the Royal Navy the D-1 displaced 283 tons on the surface and 317 submerged.

From that point American second line submarines run to the M-1 displacing 488 tons on the surface and 678 submerged while in the first line group of 94 boats the smallest is close to 600 tons to nearly 1,000 tons surface. These figures do not include a group of fleet submarines of approximately 2,000 tons.

It is apparent at a glance officers say that the United States hardly can accept such limitations.

New Officers Named for Co. C, at Somersett

SOMERSSET, Nov. 16.—An order has been issued to the members of Company C Pennsylvania National Guard announcing the resignation of Captain Wilbur J. McDonald and First Lieutenant Cecil C. McDowell and the appointment of new official officers for the first time the delegations of

CHILD'S BURNS FATAL

Believed to Have Been Caused by Playing About Heater.

Burns suffered Monday resulted in the death Tuesday of Clyde Edgar Routhzhan, a three-year-old son of Emerson E. and Belva W. Routhzhan at the family home near Murry Hill.

The child with a smaller sister was playing in the cellar and while details of the accident are not known the suspicion is that the little fellow placed a stick of wood in the pipeless furnace and on withdrawing it after it had ignited, his clothing caught fire. The child's mother and his aunt Miss Wilson were burned about the hands in extinguishing the flames. A physician dressed the boy's burns. He was buried about the side but his condition was not thought to be serious until a very high fever developed.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home followed by services at 3:30 o'clock in the Mount Olive church. Rev. J. D. Ormiston will officiate. The interment will be made in the church cemetery.

MAY HAVE WINTER CAMP

Scouts May Open Quarters at Rogers Mill.

Scout Commissioner R. C. Witt intends to open up an officers training school for the contestants as assistant and patrol leaders in the near future. There is also some talk about the scouts opening a winter camp at Rogers Mill.

This same thing has been done in other cities with poor results and the scouts show enough interest to make the thing successful it is probable that it will be early in the year.

HIRTY-SEVEN CONVERTED

Rev. Blake Holding Very Successful Revival at Flatwoods.

Thirty-seven persons have been found in the revival being conducted at Flatwoods Baptist church by Rev. A. Blake. Thirty-five are to be baptized.

Last night the pastor preached a sermon to men only, 200 attending.

Saturday night the converts will have a reservation. The revival will continue Sunday evening.

Last evening members of the church invaded the home of the pastor and his wife bringing a donation of $100.

Indian Rebels Sluggish.

OLD TIMERS OF THE WEST PENN ON VISIT HERE

Thomas Elliott and W. E. Moore Make Inspection of Power Plant.

BOTH NOW IN BUSINESS

A reunion of former West Penn officials with present heads of the company was held here yesterday afternoon. Two men sat down with the transportation company but who were once general managers here, together with H. L. Mitchell, the present manager, who is headman of the Baltimore & Ohio Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening. Mr. Robert Elliott, executive secretary of the department of benevolence of the United Christian or Disciple church was in Connellsville as a member of a team touring the country in the interest of stewardship. He was speaking at the time in the interest of support of church universities and colleges and the higher education of those who enter the ministry.

"The level of education has gone up," said Mr. Elliott. "The man in the pulpit is a graduate but a greater number of people have less education than ever before. They are better educated than ever before. The apples they eat are larger."

"The premium is on the trained man, in religious work as in secular calling," Mr. Elliott said. "It is the trained man God wants to pick out for use. Great example cited were Moses, Paul, Timothy, Martin Luther and John Wesley."

Sending young men and women of the church to educational institutions of that denomination was held to be necessary if they are to keep in the faith. Let us not sink our neighbors (or denominations) to educate our children and expect them to come back to us in the same faith. He continued. Referring to education in secular school, Mr. Elliott said: "If we insist on rigid rules in secular schools we may not be surprised if they lose their faith. He previously referred to the case of his son sent to state universities in Colorado and Missouri who became an unbeliever and who after being transferred to a college of the Christian church returned to the faith and has for many years been a social editor of one of the leading church papers. The result of thought in the minds of the non-church colleges and universities, Mr. Elliott said, is that they are not good for the soul."

Mr. Elliott's companion is at present filling an order in 10 cars for the West Penn company the first of which was brought here recently and equipped and then placed in operation on the McKeever division. All will go to that end of the system.

Revival of Export Coal Trade Sought By Mining Congress

Special to The Courier

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A joint committee of the American Mining Congress met Saturday at Commerce Room, Monday evening to discuss the relation of metal coal and oil industries to the press of day export situation.

Secretary Hoover outlined some of the difficulties in the way of the resumption of American business and emphasized the importance of the export coal business in restoring the equilibrium of trade.

The Secretary pointed out as well the statement that these three great producers of mineral products can be in the present situation through cooperation with the American shipowners in an effort to remove obstacles in the way of American over seas trade.

The Secretary pointed out as well the statement that these three great producers of mineral products can be in the present situation through cooperation with the American shipowners in an effort to remove obstacles in the way of American over seas trade.

Another speaker at the meeting was Mrs. Ethel Jenkins of Kingston, Pa., secretary of women's work of the Disciple church in Pennsylvania. She devoted her time to explaining the needs of church schools of missions and supply them into local schools.

Mr. Jenkins is a member of the Board of Directors of the Disciple church schools of missions and supply them into local schools.

There was a general discussion of the foreign exchange conditions brought about by European monetary inflation and its bearing on American foreign trade.

At the close of the conference a committee was appointed comprising F. B. Watkins chairman of the Foreign Trade committee of the National Coal Association, George S. Davidson of the Gulf Refining Company, General A. Buckley, Wells ex-president of the American Mining Congress and D. B. Thayer representing the copper industry. It is to join with representatives of other large exporting interests for the purpose of meeting with the shipping association in the hope that the shipping association will assist in the drive.

At 7:30 o'clock Mrs. E. C. Keeler of Ligonier, Pa., whose husband will conduct an annual service in the local church in January, was the speaker delivering an illustrated lecture on the art of missionary and benevolent work of the church and its influence on the life of the individual.

At 8:30 o'clock Rev. Dr. C. K. Keeler of Springfield and Stillwater, New Jersey, will continue their work and give the earliest possible information to the chairman.

In the city there are to be a number of speakers to speak and Dr. Keeler is anxious that the work he does in the community can be done.

The war widow, if young and agreeable, remarries much more easily than a young girl, making her first venture on matrimonial seas.

A physician between the ages of thirty and forty, well educated and of good physique, was called the first prize among men. Parents demanded engineers, architects, professors or lawyers for their daughters' husbands, while the girls themselves wished above all for an artist, but the Cupid broker reported this homo genus as extremely rare.

The fortunes offered with the French women varied from 50,000 to 250,000 francs. The directoress proudly stated that she had arranged a marriage between an engineer and a country girl where the bride brought 400,000 francs to her husband.

Daughters of rich peasants who have retired and wished to live in town formed the largest clientele of the bureau, in which the woman applicants numbered 15, men two or three to one.

"NOT GUILTY," a First National picture, of unusual entertainment worth, is the feature picture today. Just suppose you had a twin brother. That while you were boys playing with Ebcombe you accidentally shot your twin in the head and the subsequent wound had affected his sense of right and wrong, and later he shot a man, would you change identities with him and become an outlaw especially when you were in love with the "only" girl in the world? Perhaps you would and then again you might, no. Anyhow you cannot help following the sacrifice and subsequent thrilling adventures of Richard Dix, who plays the part of the noble brother with breathless interest. It is pulsating drama from the opening scene to the finish.

NOT THE TIME TO GRANT UNDERGROUND FRANCHISES

The present is not the time to grant any underground wire franchise in Connellsville. It is also just as much out of place for the city council to use the Blimstone Corner pole situation as a means of forcing the Bell Telephone company to accept such a grant as it would be for that company to compel council to give it.

In the first place the removal of the objectionable pole can be effected without the necessity of placing a conduit on North Pittsburg street.

Through the public spiritedness of the owners of the Weller building consent has been given for the shifting of the corner pole to a point on South Pittsburg street where it will clear the corner of the existing obstruction and without dangerously lengthening the span between the removed pole and the pole on North Pittsburg street opposite the Second National bank building.

This change will solve the problem of making Blimstone corner safer, and that is the issue on which the public has the greatest concern.

In view of such a solution having been reached it smacks of selfishness no less than a disposition to use "big stick" methods to demand of the telephone company that it also remove the pole on North Pittsburg street, to do which will require the company to install a conduit system on that street before the pole can be removed.

It strikes the public as somewhat unfair to ask the owners of the Weller building to consent to the further cluttering up of their South Pittsburg street sidewalk with an additional pole, making three in all in order that the single pole between Blimstone Corner and Orchard Alley may be removed before the conduit system is installed on South Pittsburg street.

From the statements made by the Bell company officials before council on Monday night it is evident the company has no desire nor operating necessarily, to go underground in any part of the city at this time least of all on North Pittsburg street.

It was also declared that the company has at no time had any intention or desire to use the pole situation as a club to force the granting of underground rights. In fact, it was very plain to be inferred that the company feels pressure is being applied to it to accept a conduit grant before it is ready or has need to use it.

Having made an agreement with the owners of the Weller building for the shifting of the corner pole southward along Pittsburg street a short distance provides a solution of the existing problem by freeing the corner of its obstruction. Beyond doing that there is apparently no just reason why council should require the telephone company to do more at this time. Certainly there is no justification for using the removal of another pole, north of the corner and in no wise serving as an obstruction at the corner, as a means of coercing the company into going underground in advance of the time such a step becomes a measure of necessity.

As the public understood the situation up to Monday night the telephone company was charged with being disposed to use the Blimstone Corner pole as a "big stick" to force the granting of an underground franchise. Bearing that impression the mere hint of the employment of such methods created strong public sentiment in opposition. For council to employ two "big sticks" to force the company to go underground is quite as objectionable.

The matter of granting any underground franchise needs to be gone into very deliberately and thoughtfully and a comprehensive, not a piecemeal, plan worked out beforehand. If there were but one public utility in the city to be given such rights it would be a comparatively simple matter to decide.

Having a number of wire systems in the city at which some time must be required to change from aerial to underground methods of distribution the problem becomes so complex that council should not hastily grant rights even for small sections of streets and without regard to a well developed plan, particularly when such grant will give one company a preferred location and to the possible detriment of others.

The immediately pressing matter is the removal of the Blimstone Corner pole. That does the question of underground franchises can well be deferred until later when action thereon can be taken after a well digested plan has been worked out and free of the suspicion of imputation that coercion is being used to either secure such grant or to compel its acceptance.

TYPICAL RED CROSS SERVICE.

The report of the Scottsdale branch of the Red Cross affords another very timely illustration of the diversified character of the work this agency can and is doing in all communities throughout the land.

In addition to the ordinary work of civilian relief and attention to compensation and other claims of ex-service men the Scottsdale branch performed some activities during the year which show the boldness with which this and similar organizations can meet local emergencies. Visits were paid to the tubercular patients in the Markeaton hospital and entertainment of an inspiring and cheering character provided for the former service men interned there. Reading matter, music and other means for relieving the tedium of daily confinement in the institution were provided to the great delight and substantial benefit of the patients.

Right at home, on the occasion of the disastrous fire on October 9, the Scottsdale branch promptly met the opportunity offered for taking care of people made homeless and contributed much to their relief and bodily comfort. All the while the organization had carried on its regular work wherever the need of it is found.

In these respects the Scottsdale branch is to be regarded as typical of the splendid service the Red Cross stands ready to render at all times and thereby emphasizes the obligation laid upon every good citizen to have a part in the roll call now in progress.

MOTORISTS WHO RACE AFTER FIRE TRUCKS WARNED

Are Likely to Arrest at Mount Pleasant Department Declares.

OFFICERS ARE NOMINATED

Letter to The Courier
MOUNT PLEASANT, NOV. 18.—The Mount Pleasant Volunteer Fire department, in its regular monthly meeting last evening decided to blow the fire whistle when a fire is extinguished to let those who knew the firemen know. A warning is issued to drivers of automobiles following the fire trucks to make sure they are liable to arrest and this will surely follow, if they persist in so practice. Nominations for officers in the fire department was held and resulted as follows: Chief, M. R. McNeely; Arthur Gearhart; and F. E. Hunter; assistant chief, R. L. Croftor; Harry McInnis; Clarence Holmes; Tom Shink; and John Nixon; president, Harry Long; Ernest Copeland, 1st vice-president; and John Kornright; secretary, Lloyd Shaw; William Holmes, John Cooper; Jesse Oliver; and Joseph Condon; vice-president, John Brooks; Nixon and Edward King; treasurer, August Robinslaw; and J. J. Juredy. Taken Home.

Henry Shaboda, who was struck by a truck while returning from school on Monday evening, and received a fracture of the head was able yesterday to be taken from the Memorial hospital to his home at Standard Nutriton Test.

Mrs. Bertha Collins of State college will again this week conduct her classes in nutrition at the local schools. Last week, at the church street building, eight gained weight, with Sarah Jones attaining normal weight and Martha Van Estenborg gaining one and one-half pounds and receiving the gold star. Miss Collins was assisted with her class at the church street building by Miss Anna Hoadley, the Red Cross nurse, Mrs. Chester Painter, Miss Margaret Byers and Miss Anna Galley.

GLOVES ARE IN MANY COLORS

Handcoverings for Fall and Winter include Kid, Dogskin, Calfskin and Variety of Silks.

There is a decoration in the bows of new autumn and winter gloves—the kinds of groups and single pairs give evidence that there is a code in the wearing of gloves just as there is a system in adaptation of costumes to social occasions and to practical uses.

That the great majority of glove buyers do not exactly carry out the glove creed does not disprove the intention for specific uses in having garbing.

Gloves for street wear retain the old kid skins, dressed and undressed, the former varied in full leathered surfaces and others with a sprightly sheen in the finish. Dogskins are soft with a full sheep and novi for a surprise in the announcement that calfskin is fashioned into street street gloves of standard grades, dressed and undressed. The skin has been valued for driving gloves and for hard outdoor uses, and now the skin is taned into a refined texture and appears in gloves for dress-up use.

Silk gloves are shown in profusion—they are to be a good deal used for evening wear, at the opera, theater, afternoon tea, and with the street costume. This fabric glove is so calming to the hand, so easily adjusted, that it steadily grows in favor.

The new silk gloves for street wear are double, with long wrists, and are handwly stitched on the back. They are shown in black, white, and in colors to match new fabrics. One pair is a reddish purple, a new fuchsia and the back has three rows of black stitching. Silk gloves for indoor occasions are woven with a heavy thread and the fabric is single. Some of them have dainty embroidered backs. Evening gloves of kid are in all pale tones—white and cream are leaders, with black a close rival. Some of the black gloves have back stitching in maize, red, orange, or green.

The all-black glove may be worn with good taste everywhere.

Friday Is Booster Day For Tornadoes; Cokers Play Here on Saturday

Independent Team Will Endeavor to Straighten Debts for Season.

BENEFIT CONTEST LATER

The fame of the Connellsburg Tornadoes is spreading. A letter has been received by Manager Edward P. Hangan asking for a game on Thanksgiving afternoon with a team of college stars, playing under the name of Greensburg. The game will not be possible because of the high school contest on that date, but the request is only one of many from leading teams being received daily.

The Tornadoes are, of necessity, playing a certain few teams in an endeavor to shake them from the field of contestants for the Pittsburgh Post trophy, offered to the best undefeated team outside of Pittsburg. It is for this reason that South Greensburg will be played this Friday, but the game will not be a cinch. The visitors are gathering in the best available material for battle.

Friday will be "Booster Day" for the Tornadoes. The team has been playing winning ball all season but has had to give visiting teams large guarantees. On Armistice Day the proceeds went to the American Legion post and on December 3 the proceeds will go to the Woman's Culture club. This means the team has to "make out" on Friday. Special efforts will be made to have a real crowd out.

Word that the South Greensburgers are adding strength to their line-up only created joy in the independent camp here. The team has never yet had its full strength tested and games are made with a view to getting the strongest outfits. Each time, however, it has developed that although their opponents are champions of the "old town," the locals are altogether out of their class.

Cokers to Meet Duquesne Univ. Hi Aggregation

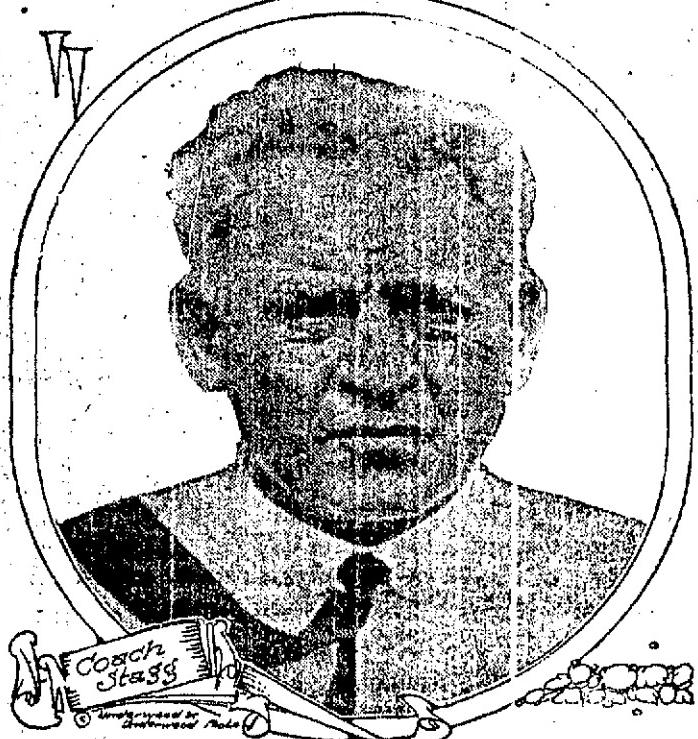

High school football players are now talking business. Most of the boys are confident of two more victories before the season closes—one on Saturday with the Duquesne University high school and the other on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day with the Dunbar township high school team.

The gridders are working out each night until it is impossible to see the ball any longer. They have been advised to take the best cure of themselves during the last few days of the season and victory is being preached by Coach Wink and the fans attack. If the boys lose the games it will result in a very lop-sided season. Should the games be won, however, things would be somewhat evened up.

High school has been seen on Foyette Field but once in four weeks and the return of the squad Saturday is certain to result in a heavy crowd. The Duquesne team will be anything but easy. The Coker offense has been the chief delight of the drilling this week and Coach Wink hopes to develop something that can overrun the visitors' defense.

The Tornadoes intend to play foot-

BIG TEN COACHES OF FOOTBALL DROP SHIFT PLAYS OF ATTACK

Big Ten coaches of football appear to have thought the East highly excited over the shift plays of attack. The Middle West apparently has discarded the shift attack, which has highly stirred up the Western coaches, officials and rule makers. Coach Stagg is reported to have said at the last meeting of coaches that shift play was not worth a whale," writes Fred A. Hayner in Chicago News.

"We have dropped it," said Coach Stagg. "Illinois and Minnesota have abandoned it and here in the West we have not used it for many seasons. As far back as 1904 I drew the two tackles back, and sent them ahead of Henry Gate. When I say the Big Ten has practically abandoned the shift I mean the other teams have found a defense for it. It can be stopped and stopped to such an extent the time used to coach the play can be used for more advantageously in developing some other attack. Williams at Minnesota has used the shift for years, and we started using it out here before he did."

Rule is Exempt

"The rule is explicit that both feet of a player must be on the ground at the snap of the ball. If there is an evasion of the rule then the play should be stopped by the officials. If they are trying to beat the rule that is another thing. There are many ways of getting around the rule, and these are often legalized nowdays."

Coach Stagg thought the problem was illomen in motion when they were pulled out of the line. The Easterners appear to be using the rule that one man may be in motion toward his own goal while the ball is being put in play. This rule was to allow a defensive fullback to run or move back into position for a kick when his side was about to punt.

Coach Helmuth of Pennsylvania is working on a shift play again this year and intends to put some new wrinkles in it known as expansion of an idea. The idea of the coaches that a play must stop till an official looks it over is regarded as a joke out here. While the official is looking it over the other team is doing the same and shifting men to meet the attack, for the defenders must be in motion before and after the ball is snapped, to plan their attack and take stations which they think will block in impending imminent force.

The Maroons have been quizzing in rules and those who are lax are sweating blood as they view the scholastic work and think of passing over a rule book. The best way to learn the rules is to talk about them with other players. It will not take a man long to become wise up to the rulings of the Big Ten officials.

ball as long as the weather will permit. As football is often played in mud ankle deep the season might run until next April if the gridders don't mind the temperature. Of course the crowd necessarily must be of the same mind, as football costs money.

"Jackie" Duper of Greensburg, writing to the Tornadoes for a game, gives his line-up as follows: Long,

Michigan, center; Teuxal, Bucknell, tackle; Elgin, Bradley, Eagles, tackle; McLeans, Carnegie Tech, tackle; Margo, Georgetown, guard; Carroll and Moore, Wash-Jeff, ends; M. Davis, Washington & Lee, halfback; Langley, Wash-Jeff, halfback; Jones, Franklin & Marshall, fullback; P. UNITED STATES LEADS IN RADIUM PRODUCTION

Importance of Mines of Bohemia Exaggerated, Says Metal Specialist.

Despite reports from London, telling of a radium corner excavated by British interests when they acquired the product of Czechoslovakian pitchblende mines, America is still and will probably continue to be the leading producer of radium, of the world, and it has the largest known reserves of radium-bearing minerals.

The importance of the pitchblende mines of Bohemia (Czechoslovakia) has been greatly exaggerated in the public mind, according to Frank L. Bass, specialist in the rarer metals, United States geological survey. Their total production up to the end of 1920 was only 20,000 grams, while during the year 1920 alone nine radium plants in this country produced a total of 21,500 grams (1,35 ounces) of radium worth about $2,250,000, and during the same year we are carrying 44 grams (about 1.5 ounces) of radium was mined.

British interests expect 50 to 60 grams of radium from their holdings in almost fifteen years, but America at the 1920 rate of production would accomplish this in two years.

"Since 1911 when the first uranium minerals were mined in this country for radium, ore carrying 183.5 grams (1.5 ounces) has been mined," explained Mr. Bass. In all about 155 grams of this quantity were extracted, but probably one-quarter of the total American output was dissipated on watch faces, signs and other self-luminous objects, principally during the war. Europe probably almost exhausted the radium supplies by such uses during the war.

The whole stock of radium in the world today is not more than 100 grams (3.5 ounces), worth $12,000,000, or 17 to 20 tons in gold coin.

In spite of optimistic estimates by some, recent investigations seem to show that our probable radium supplies, though largest in the world, are so small that they should be carefully conserved so that no radium should be wasted for illumination," Mr. Bass said.

Cheer Animal Friendship. A unique friendship exists between a ram and a heifer owned by an Alberta farmer. The ram runs with the cattle instead of the sheep. He compels the heifer to go wherever he wants her to. He brings her in from the pasture to the watering trough and back again, separated from the rest of the cattle. If she goes in the wrong direction he corrects her by going around and butting her with his head.

The GIRL A HORSE AND A DOG

By FRANCIS LYNDE

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

Once more Daddy hurried for a dense branch and lighted a torch. The tracks were empty, of course, and while we did not go into the tunnel, we could see through the broken bulkheading that it was half-filled with caved-in earth and broken stone. Underfoot there was only the coarse gravel of the tunnel spoil, and a full troop of cavalry might have passed over it without leaving any visible trail. Worse than all, Barney, the plump collie, appeared now to be completely at fault. He was running around in circles with his nose to the ground; a pretty plain indication that he had lost the trail.

"He's bat-clawed and owl-booted if I know what-all to do next," Daddy purred. "He hadn't any the best of me there, and it was precisely at this point that the split-faced dog took it into his head to add another snarl to the knotted tangle. After galloping around all over the place half a dozen times, sniffing at everything in sight, he had finally come to a stand with his nose at a crack in the tunnel boarding. The next instant he had leaped through the hole where the plank had fallen away, and presently we heard ourselves trotting on a line parallel to the rail-road track and only a little way from it.

Pretty soon the dog disappeared, and then we heard him barking at a little distance to the left of the parallel tracks. When we went to see what he had found, the mystery suddenly took another tack and veered off into a new channel. In a small grassy hollow between two of the hills we came upon the dog and the colt's pony. The bridle reins had slipped over the bronco's head, and Barney had them between his teeth and was barking and tuggin' and apparently trying to pull the pony along.

"Well, I'll be ding-digged!" said Daddy; but I couldn't understand what we ran up to see what the dog had found in the tunnel. For a half-second after Daddy thrust his torch through the hole I was afraid to look—scared stiff at the thought of what I might see. When I did look, I saw the dog digging frantically at the heap of caved-in earth, and, of course to my disordered imagination, the hole, in which he was burrowing transformed itself at once into a ravenously made grave.

"Good God!" I gasped; and then: "Look, Daddy—right under your torch!"

He looked and staggered back, and would have dropped the blazing pine branch if I hadn't caught it from his hand. For what he saw, and what I had seen, was the unmistakable print, in the soft earth just inside of the planking, of one of Jeanie's brown-leather riding-boots.

In another half-second we were both in the tunnel and Daddy was heaving the dog aside from the hole he was pawing out in the earth hill. Snatching up a broken-handled shovel that the former tunnel drivers had thrown away, the old man lunged himself madly upon the dirt pile, and since there

I had no objection to offer, we may be sure; and after we had found a camping spot, and had pieked the pony with the light rope that Jeannie always carried tied to the cantle of her saddle, we made a good fire to serve in lieu of the blankets that we didn't have, and stretched ourselves out to sleep the sleep of the tagged and leg-weary.

The next thing I knew—and it seemed to be just about a minute after I had closed my eyes—Daddy was shaking me awake.

"Time to be moggin' along, if we aim to get home for breakfast, sonny," he announced. At the break of day we were coming into the Clinchier-Alvapia road at precisely the point at which we left it the evening before.

The sun was just beginning to gild the upper heights of Old Clinchier when we tramped over the broad plateau beach below the ridge and headed for the slope that led up to the dump head. As we topped this last hill there was an amazing surprise awaiting us—a surprise and a shock. On the level spot which served as a doorway for the Twombly cabin stood a horse, and died and bled. Its drooped ears and hanging head showing that it had been ridden far and hard. And on the cabin steps, sitting at ease and calmly chowing a half-burned cigar, was Bullerton.

CHAPTER XIII.

A Battle and a Siege.

It was Daddy Ulman who made the first break.

"Charley Bullerton, where's my daughter?" he rapped out, hurling the question at the louvered door on our doorstep in a sort of deadly rage that you wouldn't have thought possible in so mild-mannered a man.

"You needn't worry about her," was the cool response. " Didn't you get the note she left for you, saying that you needn't?" Then, as if he had just seen me and recognized me: "Hello, Bullerton; we've missed a day, but I'll give you the benefit of it and not dock you. Are you selling the old water-tapped Chinabar for twenty thousand dollars this fine morning? It'll probably save you more or less trouble if you do."

He didn't get the glid of answer he wanted, or any relating to the name Unbuilding Jeannie's gun and handing it to Daddy Ulman, I walked across to where he was sitting, keeping a wary eye on the hand which would have to be the one to go after the weapon he had once showed me hanging under his left armpit.

"Mr. Twomby has just asked you where his daughter is, and you haven't told him," I gritted. "He saw her go in there and saw her come out; likewise—and the same, he meant, you seem with her did after she come out. Look as if he wanted to kill and tell us, don't he?"

Barney was certainly giving a good imitation of that, or some other anxiety. He was frisking about and barking, leaping up now and then to snap at an imaginary fly in the air. Daddy caught him by his lower jaw and held him immovable. "Go find her, Barney," he commanded; "good dog—go and her!"

The instant he was released the colonel said as if he understood perfectly what was wasted of him. Springing aside, he began to groan again, now in the ground, and within half a minute he was off, this time heading into a dire yell that led away diagonally is playing much a-tentoo to the rules, Marquis of Queenberry or other. Marlowe was a heavy-weight; he had probably fifteen pounds the advantage of me in that direction; but after I had got the thumb of my free hand upon a certain spot in his neck, he was over, not the thumb . . .

Marlowe was a heavy-weight; I crawled him and took his sun away from him, and slammed him down on a bed of broken stone and struck a blow into his fronting shoulder. But he couldn't do anything. The thumb-jab had fixed him. His hand was skewed over to one side and he couldn't straighten it. I groped around until I found that other paralyzing nerve ganglion—the one at the joint of the third vertebra.

"Listen to what he says, Daddy!" I said to the old man who stood looking on with the face of a wooden image. Then to Marlowe, who was now merely a wad of flesh, I said under the torturing touch: "Tell what you know, and all you know; and tell it quick and straight!" and I gave him

"Heavens!" I gasped; "do you suppose she's been thrown, and—maybe crippled?"

"Who—Jeannie? Why, bless your heart, Stummie, son, she can ride 'em wild! And that colt wouldn't buck a baby off. No, boy; don't you go to frettin' about buttin' like that. When she got out of that saddle, it was 'cause she was good and ready and wanted to."

"When she got off to take the train, she tried to make Barney lend the pony home," I suggested. "Would she be likely to do that?"

Daddy Ulman slapped his leg.

"You've hit it exactly, son! Don't know why I didn't think of that first. It's an old trick that she taught the colt when he was a lit'l pup. And Barney, he tried, and when he couldn't make the pinto leave off gravin', he came for us. Sure—that was the way of it. What say if we go back to the edge o' the timber and camp down? I reckon there ain't nothin' to be gained by hittin' the trail after we've had a lit'l rest-up spell, is there?"

"I had no objection to offer, you may be sure; and after we had found a camping spot, and had pieked the pony with the light rope that Jeannie always carried tied to the cantle of her saddle, we made a good fire to serve in lieu of the blankets that we didn't have, and stretched ourselves out to sleep the sleep of the tagged and leg-weary.

one more little peal on the agony nerve.

With a preliminary shriek he let it out by little's, gasping between the words and phrases like a man in the last stages of lockjaw.

"We're going to Angels—to get married," he panted. "Ain—oh—I was to meet her at Atropo—she—she was afraid to ride all the way with me—afraid—the old man—would come gunning! Oh, for God's sake, Broughton, take your thumb out of my back—you're killing me by inches!"

"You need a little gittin' worse than anybody I know," I told him. "Go on; you were to meet her at Atropo; what then?"

"I didn't see her; gat!" he howled. "I don't know where she went!"

I didn't believe much of what he was saying, and I think Daddy Ulman didn't, though we had proved it true up to the point where they had separated on the Atropo road. I would have gone on, making him talk some more, but the loath that was creeping into the old man's eyes made me let up. As I rend the loath I mount that Daffy couldn't stand it to see the third-degree start curving to its finish, so I got up and pulled Bullerton to his feet. He was mighty badly wracked, I mean him to die; still couldn't straighten his neck, and stood as if one long wavy about half paralyzed, as though it was
